President of Russian Jewish Confederation is to leave post The president of the Russian Jewish Confederation, Rabbi Yosef Berger, has informed that he will soon leave his position. Berger is to be replaced by Nikos Charalambous, who is currently the president of the Union of Hellenic Jewish Communities in Russia. Rabbi Yosef Berger informed that he will soon leave his position. "The chairmanship of the Russian Jewish Confederation will be handed to Nikos Charalambous. The reason for this decision is that the current chairman is retiring from office at the end of this year," Berger said.

Anesthesia for laparoscopic and robotic partial nephrectomy: Should we continue the current status quo? Robot-assisted laparoscopic partial nephrectomy (RLPN) has been extensively studied, and it appears to have a comparable perioperative and oncologic outcome to laparoscopic partial nephrectomy (LPN). Since the introduction of RLPN, there is a trend toward larger tumors being considered, and the size of the tumor is felt to be a significant risk factor for perioperative complications. We analyzed data to compare the outcomes of RLPN with LPN, and to determine whether there is a learning curve for robot-assisted laparoscopic partial nephrectomy. The database at our institution was searched for patients undergoing RLPN and LPN between 2010 and 2014. Demographics, perioperative characteristics, pathological parameters, and postoperative outcomes were analyzed. We determined the following outcomes: the demographic data of age, BMI, ASA classification, and preoperative serum creatinine, and the perioperative and pathological parameters, including tumor size, ischemia time, estimated blood loss, warm ischem
